LETTER FROM THE MAYOR

August, 2012

Dear Residents:

Since the world's first skyscrapers rose from the ashes of the great fire, the City of Chicago and its residents have worked tirelessly to position themselves at the forefront of art, culture, and innovation; the blues were electrified on Maxwell Street; house music was born in our basements; and our cutting-edge theater and comedy delight audiences around the world. Chicago's culture has defined us as a truly global city, creating an undeniable link between the value of arts and our prosperity. My administration and the Department of Cultural Affairs and Special Events (DCASE) are committed to continuing and strengthening this great tradition.

In 2011, the City invested millions in our local arts sector while presenting thousands of dynamic cultural programs for all to enjoy. This support not only improved the quality of life for our artists and residents, but also contributed to attracting millions of visitors, thousands of young creatives, and several multinational corporations to Chicago in 2011. Over the next three years, I look forward to working with artists, business owners, community and civic leaders, elected officials, tourists, and the citizens of Chicago to ensure art and culture continue to be the bedrock of our communities and one of our most valued exports.

Sincerely

Rahm Emanuel

Rahm Emanuel
Mayor

LETTER FROM THE COMMISSIONER

Dear Friends:

2011 was an exciting year for arts and culture in Chicago. The citizens of Chicago elected a mayor who is passionately committed to supporting the arts community and making our city's vast cultural resources accessible to all of our residents. I am proud to serve Mayor Rahm Emanuel and the citizens of Chicago in our quest to achieve this goal.

Throughout 2011, the Department of Cultural Affairs and Special Events (DCASE), with the assistance of the Chicago Office of Tourism and Culture, presented more than 2,000 programs, services and events for free or at little cost. DCASE also continued to invest in strengthening the capacity of Chicago's cultural sector, awarding more than $1 million in grants to arts groups and artists.

In May of 2011, DCASE embraced the set of recommendations crafted by the Mayor's Arts and Culture Transition Committee and achieved one of the committee's first goals: conduct an audit of all programs, events, festivals, exhibitions and performances produced and/or presented by DCASE and its agents. For the first time, the department documented the reach and impact of all its programs. This process provided us with clarity of mission, helped us eliminate redundancy and improve programmatic and fiscal efficiencies, and equipped us with benchmarks to better understand how we can best serve Chicago's artists, cultural sector, and most importantly, its residents.

We remain committed to bringing free, high-quality cultural offerings to residents and visitors. On the horizon, look for the new Chicago Cultural Plan 2012. It will be the first time the City has developed a cultural plan in more than 25 years. As I said, it's an exciting time!

Sincerely | Michelle T. Boone | Michelle T. Boone | Commissioner

CHICAGO FILM OFFICE

• CHICAGO FILM OFFICE

Network and cable television production showed a steady increase from 2010 with two new drama series filming in Chicago. Boss (Starz) and Playboy Club (NBC) established offices and constructed sets at the new Cinespace Chicago Studios in Lawndale. In addition, three new pilots for possible series – Underemployed (MTV), Powers (FX) and Cooper & Stone (CW) – were filmed entirely on location. MTV immediately picked up Underemployed as a series with production to headquarter here in 2012. Shameless (Showtime), now in its second season, also filmed on-location periodically throughout the year.

Fueled by the City's successful partnership with the productions of both Batman Begins and Dark Knight, Warner Bros., producer Chris Nolan chose Chicago as the setting for Metropolis in the action blockbuster Superman: Man of Steel. This new installment of the popular Superman franchise filmed for two months in the city and throughout the metropolitan area. The theatrical releases of Transformers: Dark of the Moon (Paramount) and the critically acclaimed Contagion (Warner Bros) – both filmed largely in Chicago in 2010 – generated international press coverage of Chicago as a leading industry production center.

Television commercial production increased more than 60% as compared to 2010, with a total of 120 local and national spots produced in Chicago. The Illinois Film Production Tax Credit is one of the few incentive programs in the nation to target commercial production. As a result, advertisers and their creative agencies are increasingly viewing Chicago as a favorable hub for television commercial production. Currently, 40 other states offer tax incentives to the film industry, creating an unprecedented level of competition nationwide. But Chicago's overall production value – affordability, talent, look and cooperation – ranked high by industry standards.

2011 film production accounted for more than $150 million in local spending and job creation.

These unique events offer consumers an engaging opportunity to interact and make a connection with our brands. Past events have allowed festival goers to experience the World Famous Budweiser Clydesdales, a mobile NASCAR unit, an interactive Bud Light music experience, a Belgian Beer Café and the ability to interact with Budweiser-sponsored USA Olympic Athletes."

Jason Lichtman
