OVERVIEW

For more than 100 years, the Maxwell Street Market has thrived as one of the oldest open air markets in the nation. The legendary market continues to offer an eclectic mix of foods and finds as well as some of the city's tastiest Mexican and Latin street food. Known as the birthplace of Chicago Blues music and the "Maxwell Street Polish," this FREE outdoor market attracts a year-round following of bargain hunting shoppers and foodies looking to satisfy their palette with authentic ethnic cuisine. Live entertainment and special programming scheduled throughout the year add to the market's appeal.
