MAYOR EMANUEL AND MERGE HEALTHCARE ANNOUNCE AN ADDITIONAL 200 NEW JOBS TO CHICAGO

Leading health technology provider will also add 100 health kiosks to Chicago and hold national convention in city through 2014.

This morning Mayor Rahm Emanuel announced that Merge Healthcare (NASDAQ: MRGE) will add 200 jobs to Chicago within the next two years, in the critical and growing field of health information technology.

"I am pleased that Merge Healthcare is adding these jobs for Chicagoans in health IT, a growing field for the future," said Mayor Emanuel. "Additionally, their commitment to place 100 health kiosks around the city will allow Chicagoans to take control of their individual health and get crucial information that will help them live longer and better."

In addition to the 200 jobs, Merge will provide 100 Vitals Kiosks to be placed throughout the City. Merge Vitals Kiosks are internet-connected health stations where consumers can check their health vitals for free, including weight, body mass index (BMI), blood pressure and heart rate.

"We're proud to be contributing not only to the economic health of our city with our commitment to bring 200 new jobs to Chicago, but also to the personal health of its residents with the placement of 100 of our Merge Vitals Kiosks throughout the city," said Jeff Surges, Merge CEO.
